Dan-D-Pak™ Peanut and Peanut Butter Products are Safe for Consumption

Canadian Food Inspection Agency (CFIA) and United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) have recently raised a recall of Salmonella contamination on peanut and peanut butter source from Peanut Corporation of America (PCA).

Products made or distributed by Dan-D Foods Ltd. are not involved in the Salmonella contamination recall, and none of the peanut products/ingredients from PCA are used in any of our products.

Furthermore, all our roasted products are processed to minimum internal temperature at 140°C, which is a sufficient processing temperature to inactivate all the pathogenic bacteria including Salmonella compare to CFIA or USDA requires at >71.1°C.

Food quality and safety are always the highest priorities for our products, and we will keep monitoring the developing situation with this pathogenic contamination recall. For any update information of this peanut butter/products/ingredient recall, you can access the websites at CFIA (www.inspection.gc.ca) or USDA website (www.usda.gov). If you have any questions regarding our peanut/peanut butter products, feel free to contact our Quality Department.
